University of Winchester Music Centre Overview

The Music Centre is the co-curricular music department at the University of Winchester. It is open to all staff and students at the University of Winchester as well as members of the local community. There are no auditions to join any of the ensembles and no membership cost is involved.

Housed within the Student Services department, the Music Centre is overseen by Neil Valentine (Creative Director) & Dr Vicky Feldwick (Manager). Events are coordinated by the Music Centre Team which comprises all ensemble leaders and Excellence Awardees. Many of the ensembles are led by students and the centre welcomes suggestions of new ensembles. We operate a wide variety of ensembles, sessions, workshops, concerts and events throughout the year.

The Music Centre acknowledges the University's core values and seeks to embrace them in all its ventures. We particularly focus on the following:

Community – The Music Centre provides a service for both the University community and local community of Winchester. We are involved in a variety of charity, outreach, for profit and non profit endeavours in and around Winchester. We are a close family of students, staff and others, providing a space for all to participate and explore their common interests and passions regardless of academic subject. We are supportive community within the larger university community.

Diversity – We offer a vast and diverse range of styles/repertoire from African Drumming and Steel pans, to Gospel, Barbershop and sacred choral music. Our members have extremely diverse skills and passions, which encourage us to maintain a healthy balance of classical and popular traditions. We offer various teaching styles to welcome members of all experiences. The very nature of our community leads us to fit in with various contexts and locations for performance.

Participation – The Centre welcomes individuals from all backgrounds and encourages everyone to participate in all of its' endeavours. We offer not only a large, varied range of performance prospects, but also opportunities to develop confidence and skills in the areas of leadership, composition and event management. To engage with the centre you need not have any previous experience in music making. All we require of our members is respect and enthusiasm.

As an applicant for the Excellence Award, we expect you to respect, encourage and embrace the Music Centre and the wider University values.

"Thank you for considering applying to be an Excellence Awardee! Most of our Excellence Awardees find fantastic friendship and community within the Music Centre, finding like-minded people and fellow musicians to share their university experiences with. The good news is, this is not limited to those who are successful. Whether you are offered the award or not, we very much hope that you will be part of the Music Centre and help us to make fantastic music in a vibrant musical community together."
